Economic Diplomacy-Peter A.G. Bergeijk 2011-08-25 In a climate of enhanced global competition, attention for economic diplomacy has substantially grown, as much in the West as in other parts of the world. Interpreting Nature-I. G. Simmons 2013-01-11 Human society has constructed many varied notions of the environment. Scientific information about the environment is often seen as the only worthwhile knowledge. This ignores the complexities created by interaction between people and the environment. Idealist thinking argues that everything we know is based on a construct of our minds and that all is possible. Can both be correct and true? Interpreting Nature explores the position of humanity in the environment from the principle that the models we construct are imperfect and can only be provisional. Having examined the way in which the natural sciences have interrogated nature, the types of data produced and what they mean to us, this looks at the environment within philosophy and ethics, the social sciences and the arts, and analyses their role in the formation of environmental cognition.

Agriculture in the Australian Economy-John E. Begg 1990 The third edition of this eminent text preserves the standard of the 1967 and 1982 editions and develops a wider perspective on Australian agriculture to keep up with economic, political, and administrative changes since 1982. Acknowledged leaders in different fields describe the economic structure of Australian agriculture and how and why this has changed. The first day was occupied with presentations which analyzed the recent macroeconomic experience of eight developed Western economies and drew lessons from these experiences, particularly lessons which might be of relevance to Canada. The country reports were grouped in pairs: West Germany and France, the Netherlands and Sweden, Austria and Switzerland, and Australia and the United Kingdom, with brief discussion following each pair. The second day consisted of sessions on three general topics thought to be of particular relevance to Canada: the conduct of macropolicy in a federal, regionally diverse economy; the role for incomes policy in macroeconomic strategy; and macroeconomic response to export/real exchange-rate shocks."--

Minding the Public's Business-Economic Council of Canada 1986 As a number of governments have assigned a high priority to the review and selected rationalization of their holdings of public corporations, Canadians have come to appreciate the importance of understanding the extent and consequences of government involvement in business. In initiating this study it was the view of the Economic Council of Canada that they could make a unique contribution based on the broad perspective they could bring to bear on the important issues. Examining federal as well as provincial enterprises, mixed along with wholly-owned enterprises, and public corporations that are monopolies as well as those that operate in competitive sectors, has indeed provided a useful vantage point from which to observe the strengths and limitations of government ownership. This study develops a general framework for the evaluation of public enterprise. It draws on evidence from various sectors to develop an understanding of the features of public enterprise and of the roles for which it is reasonable to employ this public policy instrument. It analyses the issue of accountability and control by attempting to explore the links between the question of control and the role which public enterprises are expected to fulfil.
