Nursing Homes-John E. Dicken 2010-05 Under contract with the Centers for Medicare and Medicaid Services (CMS), states conduct surveys at nursing homes to help ensure compliance with federal quality standards. Over the past decade, there have been reports on inconsistencies in states' assessment of nursing homes' quality of care, including understatement -- that is, when state surveys fail to cite serious deficiencies or cite them at too low a level. In 2008, there was a report that 9 states had high and 10 had low understatement based on CMS data for FY 2002 through 2007. This report examines the effect on nursing home deficiency understatement of CMS's survey process, workforce shortages and training, supervisory reviews of surveys, and state agency practices. Illus.

Medical Care of the Nursing Home Resident-Richard W. Besdine 1996 As the population ages, physicians will increasingly care for elderly and other persons residing in nursing homes and other life-care facilities. More than 1.5 million Americans live in nursing homes; their number may triple in the next generation. Good and caring physicians have been hesitant about delivering care in nursing homes or have been reluctant to visit them at all. The reasons range from inconvenience to lack of information about or comfort dealing with the common clinical problems encountered. Specialist geriatricians are not the answer to the growing need for care of frail older patients; generalist physicians are now expected and will continue to be expected to provide primary care to adults of all ages, including those residing in nursing homes. Medical Care of the Nursing Home Resident: What Physicians Need to Know is a project of the Task Force on Aging of the Health and Public Policy Committee of the American College of Physicians. The Task Force reviews the knowledge base in nursing home care and develops recommendations directed primarily toward the nongeriatrician.

Elder Mistreatment-National Research Council 2003-02-06 Since the late 1970s when Congressman Claude Pepper held widely publicized hearings on the mistreatment of the elderly, policy makers and practitioners have sought ways to protect older Americans from physical, psychological, and financial abuse. Yet, during the last 20 years fewer than 50 articles have addressed the shameful problem that abusers"and sometimes the abused themselves"want to conceal. Elder Mistreatment in an Aging America takes a giant step toward broadening our understanding of the mistreatment of the elderly and recommends specific research and funding strategies that can be used to deepen it. The book includes a discussion of the conceptual, methodological, and logistical issues needed to create a solid research base as well as the ethical concerns that must be considered when working with older subjects. It also looks at problems in determination of a report's reliability and the role of physicians, EMTs, and others who are among the first to recognize situations of mistreatment. Elder Mistreatment in an Aging America will be of interest to anyone concerned about the elderly and ways to intervene when abuse is suspected, including family members, caregivers, and advocates for the elderly. It will also be of interest to researchers, research sponsors, and policy makers who need to know how to advance our knowledge of this problem.
